PREFACE

The Third Volume of The ABRIDGED COMPENDIUM of AMERICAN GENEALOGY is presented in the belief that its predecessors have established for it a place in American genealogical bibliography, and therefore no further introduction for this volume is necessary.

However, the simplification of style, and the more liberal treatment of the subject-matter, which will be readily apparent to those familiar with the work, produces an individuality in this volume which is not shared by its predecessors.

For the benefit of those not familiar with this work it may be stated that it had its inception in 1917 as a war measure. Participation in the World War by the United States made necessary a source of information for furnishing American lineages and inter-marriages, which demonstrated the real need for an authentic genealogical work of national scope. This work was projected with the primary object of fulfilling that need.

Seven years (1917-24), were consumed in preparation and research before the first volume was published in December, 1924. During this period what are believed to be the most extensive genealogical lineage files extant were compiled by the publishers, and these are now serving the public apart from this work.

How well the first volume fulfilled its promise was demonstrated by the cordial reception accorded it by genealogists and librarians qualified to judge, and by their acceptance of it as the foundation upon which The Standard Genealogical Encyclopedia of America could be built. Succeeding volumes supplement but can not supplant Volume I.

It is, of course, gratifying to the publishers and editors to know that The ABRIDGED COMPENDIUM of AMERICAN GENEALOGY has won an assured place in the brief list of reference works deemed indispensable in public and institutional libraries.

Volume I contains over 5,000 records and upward of 10,000 lineages, comprising 1,148 pages.

Volume II, published in December, 1926, contains over 1,600 records and upward of 5,000 lineages, comprising 628 pages. In this volume effort was directed toward completeness of lineages rather than toward including a larger number of records, with the result that, in Volume I the records average 2 lineages, whereas in Volume II the records average about $3\frac{1}{2}$ lineages.

Volume III, published in December, 1928, contains over 2,000 records and upward of 6,000 lineages, comprising 810 pages.

It may be stated that the indexes to these three volumes list upward of 150,000 ancestors and include virtually every name distinguished in the colonial history of America. The more than 20,000 lineages already published in this series are not only the essence of American genealogical bibliography but a large percentage of these data can not be found elsewhere in print. Each volume is entirely new, complete and independent in itself. Only a few records have been repeated and these for important corrections or amendments.

The ideal upon which this work was founded is national service, and the publishers and editors have held this ideal clearly in mind. So dedicated, the editors welcome suggestions for improvement of style and treatment of subject-matter, as well as constructive criticism tending to increase the usefulness of the work. Suggestions of names, and data pertaining to them, will be thankfully received and accorded every consideration for inclusion in Volume Four of this work. However, the editors reserve the right to accept for publication or reject any data submitted to them at their discretion. The records in this volume have been included with only one view, to increase the usefulness of the work; no space has been paid for, nor can it be.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sincere thanks are due to the many persons who have kindly loaned books and manuscripts which have assisted greatly in the production of this work, and also to many who have offered suggestions that materially aided in the solution of knotty problems. Especially are thanks due to officers and members of the patriotic-hereditary, genealogical and historical societies. Their hearty co-operation has been a constant source of encouragement, so that it may truly be said that courtesies received from them have contributed in a larger degree toward the completion of this volume than any other extraneous source.

EXPLANATION AND ANALYSIS OF RECORDS

While every person acquainted with genealogy will readily understand the records as they appear in this volume, an explanation is here given for the information of those not familiar with genealogical usages and terms.

As no standardized system for recording American genealogies was in existence at the time this work was projected, there was no pattern on which to fashion the records. English methods, designed mainly for descent from royalty, nobility or gentry, could not be applied to American usages; therefore it was necessary to originate and develop a system to conform to American standards of the worth of ancestry. It is believed that the system adopted for The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy, will meet with general approval for its simplicity of style and clarity of presentation.

In numbering the generations in America it was found necessary to represent the subject of the record as number one, and his parents as number two, since under this system the lineages of both father and mother, seldom of equal number of generations, always conjoin in their common number 2. Thus, the subject is represented as number one; his parents are always numbered 2; his grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 3; his great grandparents in both lines of descent are always numbered 4; and so on, to the earliest known ancestor in America, who is given the highest number, which shows the number of generations in America in each line of descent.

Confusion was also avoided under this method of numbering by eliminating the designation "10th from," or "5th from," as the case may be; the numbers, as given in the records, show clearly the number of generations in America and that the subject is a descendant OF the ancestors named; of course, he is also descended FROM the ancestors, but in a generation one number lower than that given the ancestors in the record.

The double dates which will be found throughout the work in the earlier generations in the records are made necessary by the change from the Old Style to the New Style of reckoning of the beginning of the year. In 1563, France adopted January 1st as the beginning of the year. Scotland adopted January 1st in 1600, but it was not until 1752 that England adopted the same date. Before 1752 (when the year began March 25th), in the records of the colonies that followed the English custom, dates between January 1st and March 24th, inclusive, were often indicated by two consecutive years (1700/01), to be interpreted at the option of the reader, as conforming to the New, or to the Old Style. For example: February 22, 1700/01, meant February 22, 1700, if the year was considered in the Old Style, ending March 24; if considered in the New Style, ending December 31, it would be 1701. The last year of a double date corresponds to our present system of reckoning.

Hyphenated double dates, as 1700-01, indicate that the event to which these years refer is not definitely known, but that it did occur during either of the years. When a period of years is hyphenated, as 1700-05, it indicates that the event referred to occurred between those years.

Records are divided into paragraphs, as follows: Name of the subject with place and date of birth; paternal lineage from the earliest known ancestor in America down to the father (numbered 2); maternal lineage similar to the paternal; the parents of the subject conjoined in their common number 2, followed by their children numbered consecutively in the order of birth, and to whom married; data of marriage of the subject, the children of this marriage, also numbered consecutively in the order of birth, with data of education, military service and marriage; biography of the subject, ending with his present residence address.

It will be noted that the surname of the earliest ancestor, in each lineage, appears in Bold Face type; this is to emphasize that the following generations, whose Christian names only are given, are all of the same surname as the name in the Bold Face type unless the surname is changed by the marriage of a daughter, in which case her husband's name appears also in Bold Face type to emphasize the change in surname. In some records it will be noted that the surname changes frequently and every change is emphasized by Bold Face type. This style of emphasis has also been carried out in the surname of the father of the subject to emphasize the fact that his children, whose Christian names only are given, bear the same surname.

Where the cross-reference (qv) appears after the name of an immigrant ancestor it is intended to refer the reader to the list of Immigrant Ancestors on pages 645-692 of this volume, where data pertaining to him will be found. This method was adopted in order to avoid frequent repetition of the identical data, and it permits the compilation of a comprehensive non-sectional list of immigrant ancestors, which, in itself, is a valuable genealogical and biographical contribution.

WILLIAM GOODELL FROST. Learned the condition and the heart of the remote dweller in the Southern mountains and drew to his worth and need the attention of the world. Realizing that college work, which he well appreciated, could not give impulse to the "cotters" and "village blacksmiths" that make up the mass of mountain people, he enlisted men like Josiah Strong, Eliot, Bonser, and devised an extension service and short vocational, normal and "foundation" courses "to lift society from the bottom." These projects won donors like Pearsons, Kennedy, Carnegie, Hall, and secured equipments and endowments exceeding ten million dollars. And hundreds of neighborhoods were changed when one or two boys took a short vocational course, or even one winter term, at Berea.

WILLIAM GOODELL (1792-1878). According to Henry Wilson the foremost digger-up of facts and arguments for the political abolitionists. Edited the Investigator (Providence), the Philanthropist (Boston), and the Genius of Temperance (New York). Was with Arthur Tappan in founding the N.Y. Anti-Slavery Society in the face of mob violence, and soon after, 1833, with Garrison and Whittier in starting the American Anti-Slavery Society in Philadelphia. Helped Birney and Gerritt Smith start the Liberty Party in 1840. 1843 he prevailed against Salmon P. Chase in securing an early nomination of a Liberty Party ticket, and from this time until the end of the Civil War he was editing papers and writing books. He took the radical position, now recognized as sound, that Congress had the right to abolish slavery in the states, and this radical wing which he represented was of high service to the Free Soil and Republican parties in enabling them to occupy a middle ground.

ELEANOR MARSH FROST. Rearing five children to honorable service (Stanley, writer; Wesley, consul-general; Norman, educator; Cleveland, killed in the World War when comdg. his co.; Edith, trained nurse, chemist, doctor's wife), she was still her husband's best adviser and helper in developing the extension service and elementary vocational, normal and "foundation" schools that distinguished Berea. Sacrificing home-life to be with him in the mountains and in the great cities, she was an intimate friend to multitudes of both the poorest and the richest people in the land.

- Ky. State, 1916). Instr. and prof. Greek, Oberlin Coll., 1877-92; pres. Berea Coll., 1892-1920, fixing national attention on need and worth of the Southern Mountaineers, and gathering over $10,000,000, for education—largely elementary vocational, normal, etc.—adapted to their conditions. Since engaged in literary pursuits (see Who's Who in America). Residence: Berea, Ky.

"MULBERRY CASTLE", home of Gov. Thomas Broughton, was built in 1714, an exact reproduction of one of the Broughton homes in England; the brick and mahogany, with panels inside of house, were brought from England; named "Mulberry" because Gov. Broughton and his father-in-law, Sir Nathaniel Johnson, were both interested in growing silk worms. Was used as a fortress, cannon being mounted in each of the four towers, and place of refuge for the surrounding country during the Indian wars; on each of the towers, reproduced in colors, were the Arms of England.
